HAVE A CARE AND BEWARE!

There's a boy full of joy, seldom coy, has a toy
Which consists of a quiver and bow;
By repute he's acute, rather mute, but can shoot,
And his aim is at random, I trow,
It is clear he's a queer little dear, and I hear
That his arrows are swift in their flight.
Have a care, and beware how you dare anywhere
Meet this youngster by day or by night.

Now he brings 'neath his wings silken strings, pretty things,
And he calls them his true lovers' knot,
Which he tries to disguise, as he ties up eyes,
Then he's blind as a bat, every jot;
But I find, though he's blind, he's inclined oft to bind
Maidens' hearts with his gay "cords of love;"
So beware, have a care how you fare when you dare
To commune with this boy as you rove.

With a glance of romance he'll advance and enhance
All the virtues that he may possess;
On his knees he will please; by degrees he will tease;
Then he'll flatter, and soothe, and caress—
So again, to be plain, if you deign to retain
In your service this cherub, I say,
Have a care, and beware, or he'll dare e'en to bare
You in triumph to Hymen one day.

Mail Time at the Village Post Office.

Half an hour before the arrival of the daily mail they begin to come in—the merchant who expects to see age in the mirror, the blacksmith who possibly get one.

in hopes, the laborer with the slightest idea that he will get anything more interesting than a circular advising him to insure his life before it is too late, the farmer who has friends out West or down East, and who can confidently count on his weekly papers anyhow. As the mail-boy arrives at the door there is a ripple of excitement which extends even to the bare-footed boy who has been sent down with three big coppers to mail a letter directed in a cramped, old-fashioned hand. One can see by the way he looks from the letters to the jars of candy in front of the store that he is speculating on the risk of dropping the missive into the river and investing the money where it will do Uncle Sam no good.

There is a hush while the mail is being distributed. The pampered aristocrat who can afford to pay box rent at the rate of forty cents a year keeps his eye on his particular box, while the down trodden citizen, who is compelled to go into the "general delivery," silently argues that the heavier the mail bag the more chance he has of being favored. Just at this moment the postmaster is "a bigger man than 'Boss' Tweed," or anybody else, and if he does not feel at least ninety-nine per centum of his official importance it is because he has to stop now and then to decipher the superscription of a letter.

After what seems an interminable delay the windows are opened and a general rush is made, and in ten minutes the only person left cautious-ly approaches the window and inquires:

ly approaches the window and inquires:

"Anything for any of us?"

"Nothing," is the reply as the letters are rapidly overrun.

"Anything for brother Jim's folks?"

"Nothing."

"Walker wanted me to inquire for him."

"Nothing for any of the Walkers."

"Old Mrs. Lee hailed me as I drove by and said she was looking for a letter from her son Bill in Leadville. I s'pose it ain't any use to inquire, for Bill couldn't write a letter in three weeks."

"Nothing for Mrs. Lee."

The man started to go, but suddenly recollecting himself he turned and said:

"Come to think of it, McArthur's hired lady, for sent off for a lottery ticket, and she's draw onthin' of 'em. The anderies are a dead end. I'll get 'em from the barn."

He asked me to inquire.

Sam White, but I never asked him how he spelled it."

"Nothing for him was the monotonous reply,

"Well, that's all, I guess. Purty bad weather on wheat, ain't it? Looks like rain but maybe it'll seed around."

Natural History.

A policeman having been called upon to shoot a dog in a yard on Brush Street recently, took seat on a fence, drew up his legs out of danger, and remarked to himself as he took aim:

"The seat of all vitality is the heart, and here goes."

A cow in the lot beyond threw up her head and went galloping around, and the dog trotted over the yard as if perfectly at home.

The officer got a good charge ready, and observed:

"The fear of death is as strongly exhibited in beasts as in men, and their dying agonies have been known to bring tears to the eyes of their executioners—bang!"

A woman who was working up an old knot in the alley flung down the ax, put her head over the fence, and warned the policeman that she didn't want to be bothered any more, though she wouldn't object to his shooting up in the air if the police regulations required it.

"Natural history asserts that the average life of a canine is four years," resumed the officer, as he brought the revolver down again, "and they are subject to fourteen different diseases. I will now take that chap right behind the ear, penetrating skull and brain, and causing death in from two to four minutes."

The smoke had scarcely lifted, when a melon peddler, whose horse was coming down the street at a slow pace, rose up in his wagon, and called out:

"If you boys don't stop shootin' beans at me I'll wollop the hull crowd rich ones and all! That ere last one just tickled my nose!"

"Natural hist—" began the officer, when the dog discovered a hole under the fence and slipped into the street and made off.

Natural history," repeated the blue-coat, as he dropped off the fence, "explicitly states that dogs must stand still when being shot at, and if I didn't hit him it's the fault of his education."

Wit and Wisdom.

Passages of arms—Sleeves.

Home rule—Henpecking.

A tight fit—Delirium tremens.

Back yards—The trains of ladies' dresses.

Consider not so much your dress as your address.

When two goats meet by the head 'tis a button-mill.

"There is plenty of room at the top," as the bald-headed man said to his full beard.

Adam, in his day, was forced to occupy the ground for his bed. He didn't live in the cot-age.

Some one inquires: "Where have all the ladies' belts gone?" Gone to waist, long ago.

Be courteous with all, but intimate with few; and let those few be well tried before you give them confidence.

A compositor who "set up" the toast, "Woman—without her man would be a savage," put the stops in the wrong place, and it read, "Woman, without her man, would be a savage."

"Shon," said a Duchman, "you may say what you please 'pout pad neighbors; I have had the vorst neighbors as never vas. Mine pigs and mine hens come home mit dere ears split, and todder day two of them come home missing."

The G. A. R. Fair.
The Fair in aid of Geo. S. Cram Post, No. 54, which has just been held, was a success; even beyond the most sanguine expectations of the interested soldiers. Active preparations were made by men, who used every endeavor to push the affair, and by women who devoted their whole time to the work. The hall was decorated beautifully, and with artistic skill; and we think it never presented so fine an appearance before.

The attractions were numerous, and well worth ones attention; among which we noticed refreshment, ice cream, tea and coffee, confectionery, oyster and antiquarian tables; Old Woman in her shoe; express office; and several articles disposed of by ticket. There were also Camp-fires each evening, illustrating soldier life; they were ably assisted in this, by Prof. Benj. Shepard, and by a select quartette of singers.

The music on wednesday evening was by the Mechanics Band, assisted by Dustin & Colby's Orchestra; and on Thursday evening, by the band alone.

Thursday evening was in many respects a repetition of the previous evening, with a slight change. The selling was from the same tables and was not quite as brisk, owing to a lighter croud; still there was considerable money spent by those present. The announcement of the sales by ballot occurred during the latter part of the evening, and were as follows:

Bible to Masonic Lodge, Chair to Wm. B. Reynolds, Watch to C. C. Whittier, Barrel of Flour to John A. Lang, Web of Sheeting is drawn by No. 56; whoever holds the same will please present it to the committee and receive their prize. Uncle Sam and his drummers were present each evening and added much to the martial spirit of the entertainment.

The Champion Bee Charmer.

A gentleman residing near Nashville, in walking over his place in Eighteenth District, discovered a swam of bees in a sycamore tree. He immediately sent over for Uncle Dan, an old colored man, known far and near as a bee charmer. Uncle Dan soon made his appearance, bringing a rope with him. The gentleman wondered what he was going to do with the rope, but Uncle Dan only shook his head, and said he knew what he was about.

Taking off his clothes—all except his shirt, the tail of which was remarkable only for its brevity—Uncle Dan took the rope between his teeth and began to climb the tree. The bees were flying thick about him, but Uncle Dan only smiled as he ascended the tree. Reaching a limb in the near vicinity of the one on which a majority of the bees had congregated he tied one end of the rope to it, and the other he fastened around his waist.

This was to prevent him from striking the ground in case he should fall. The gentleman then tossed a hatchet up to Uncle Dan, and he at once began to chop the limb containing the bees. When the limb went to the earth, the bees went with it, but they soon rose again, and finding Uncle Dan in the tree and believing he was the cause of their sudden decent, attacked him with great vigor.

Uncle Dan uttered a few Comanche yells, and cried allowed for the Lord to have mercy on him. The gentleman below knew from his cries that Uncle Dan was in distress, and called to him to cut loose. This he attempted to do, but in an unfortunate moment his foot slipped, and he swung off, suspended between heaven and earth. The bees then attacked their enemy with increased power, showing no mercy. Uncle Dan shouted and prayed alternately, till the whole district was alarmed, many people rushing to the scene with shot-guns. Uncle Dan's body swung round and round in in the sun, and every time his shirt-tail was lifted to the breeze a score or two of bees would slip under and sting him. Their work in a moment was done, and on by desperate force, and then come the like of which had been witnessed in that section before, and probably never will be again. It is a half mile from the tree to Uncle Dan's house, and it is safe to say that forty bees stung him at every step he made going the distance. He got safely into the house and between the mattress and feather bed before the bees finally let up on him, and there he remained until late last night, fearing even to poke his head out, and when he did so his own wife didn't recognize him. He seemed to have grown wonderfully fat since she last saw him. In fact he did not recognize himself.

The attending physician said to the reporter this morning that Uncle Dan was "mighty bad off" and he doubted if he would recover.

A Word to You, Boys.

First: Be honest. By which we do not mean, simply, do not steal. That goes without saying. The young man who, before his beard is grown, thinks it clever to cheat his tailor, or sneak out of his little debts at college, has already laid a sure foundation of ill-fortune. Nothing is known so quickly or hangs to a man so long as the reputation of dishonesty. It is the fleck of mildew which eats and grows blacker from year to year. Boys are fatuously blind to the lengthening shadows which these faults of sharp dealing and lying in their earliest years throw down their whole future. In a year or two they will be asking for patronage from the public or a chance in the business world, and they will find that in damaging their character they have already squandered their only capital. No merchant would take a boy even as porter into his employ who was not known to be honest.

I observed, while threshing grain last Fall, that where men had used Clough's Adjustable Sieve, to clean their seed, the crop was nearly one-third larger than where it had not been so screened; the kernels were larger, the straw was heavier, and the crop was better every way.

Printing Office Secrets.

The Singleton (N. S. W.) Argus prints the following reply to an enquiry as to the author of an article in that paper.

"A properly conducted printing office is as much a secret as a Masonic lodge. The printers are not under oath of secrecy, but always feel themselves as truly in honor bound to keep office secrets as though triple-oathed.

Any employee in a printing office who willingly disregards this rule in relation to printing office secrets would not only be scorned by his brethren of the craft, but would lose his position at once. We make this statement because it sometimes happens that a communication appears in a newspaper under an assumed signature which excites comment, and various parties try to find out who is the author. Let all be saved the trouble of questioning the employees of the printing office. 'know-nothings' on these. On such matters, eyes and ears, but no nose. we feel confident that we can sell as low as anyone in this, or any other place.
